Is it just me, or is the Cowboy actually mourning an imploded building?

Also, why are we at work?

I'd say it's more nostalgia than mourning. And you're at work because you love the smell of napalm in the morning.

Or possibly for the comp time.

I'm at work because the free press never rests, baby.

Where I grew up, they imploded stuff on a weekly basis. And if the Historical Preservation Society tried to prevent that, whatever it was Mysteriously Burned Down In The Night.

Huh.

Free press? Oh, right, I've heard of that.

That we can't enter it? Dude, sometimes it's a huge relief. I mean, think how much money we might have spent over our lifetimes on giant foam cowboy hats, team jerseys, big TVs, stadium nachos made with glow-in-the-dark gluey pseudo-cheese...

That we can never fully compass what this loss means to our friend.

I suppose you're right; it's not quite like when they took down that 5.10 with the overhang before I got good enough to try it...

(Also, u r srs playpus. That r srs reply. g)
